Letter of Recommendation for Aarav Aggarwal

Politics & Debate | 3rd July to 14th July 2023

It is my pleasure to write this Letter of Recommendation for Aarav Aggarwal.

This two-week online course introduced students to politics, and supported them in developing their public speaking and debating skills. We first discussed political systems, taking an in-depth look at democracy and the advantages and disadvantages of various voting systems. We covered many topics, including identity politics, revolutions and social movements, participatory politics and direct democracy. Throughout the course, the activities encouraged the students to develop their critical analyses of political concepts and processes. We discussed techniques for persuasive writing, public speaking, and how to develop arguments for debates. In each session, the students debated and practised the techniques they had learnt to evaluate the issue at hand and develop their collaborative skills.

Aarav participated passionately, asked apt and pointed questions, and was always ready to contribute. He has an incredibly impressive appreciation for the nuances of even the most advanced content we covered. Aarav clearly has a real passion for the subject, and I hope he continues to explore this interest with such dedication. He attended all sessions.

Aarav was an excellent student who was one of the strongest in the cohort. Araav frequently spoke in class, demonstrating a strong awareness and engagement with the topics discussed. He frequently led the way in discussions, offering valuable contributions and counterpoints in debates, class discussions and breakout rooms. Aarav's attitude in class was thoughtful, honest and reflective, mirroring his intellectual engagement with the material. Furthermore, his essay entitled "What Is Democracy?" engaged maturely with not just the mechanics of democracy, but also some of the values associated with this charged concept. Aarav was a real asset to the class, and I'm sure he will do very well in his future studies.

Aarav has a very bright future ahead of him; he is a highly impressive individual and I wish him all the best in his future endeavours.
